GOODLOE REPLIES TO CLAY ON ROAD TAX

Says No Better Remedy For Bad Roads Is Offered Than Is Now Before People

Judge John D. Goodloe sends the following reply to the latest card of Green Clay on the special road tax question:

I note that Mr. Clay is very diligent in pointing out the weakness of Madison county road system, but what does he offer as a substitute?

He points out its ills but what cure does he offer?

He reminds me of the old doctor who tells his patient he is sick without saying what special disease, or giving him any medicine.

If Mr. Clay or any one has any practical suggestions to offer as to how the system may be improved and the roads made better the county and the Citizens' Committee would be delighted to adopt them, but I am sure the public will agree with me that what we have is better than nothing—any house is better than no house and I for one prefer to, at least, have plans for a new one before tearing down the old one.

After reading Mr. Clay's recent article it will be very patent to the observing public that the courts have made a serious mistake in classifying the Lexington pike as a main thoroughfare instead of Clay lane.

Ninety-nine people out of every hundred have to travel over more or less of one of these state roads to reach his county seat. Are they main thoroughfares?

Because our present system is faulty shall we destroy it without having even plans for a new one?

The purpose of the 20c tax is to care for the state roads so as to set free the present revenue and machinery for the maintenance of the other roads in order that they too may be made and maintained in a high state of repair.

Mr. Clay's conclusion that Madison county cannot receive aid reminds me of an old story, and may be answered in the same way. An old negro having been slapped in jail sent for a lawyer and after hearing the case, the lawyer said "Why, they can't put you in jail for that." The negro answered "They can't?" "No, they can't," said the lawyer. But the negro answered "Yes, boss, but they done done it."

Whether the Federal Government will aid or not makes no difference for it "has done done it" on the only Federal Aid project of this county.

The same answer is applicable as to the State—she has already taken and is now maintaining 18 miles and is now taking 6 miles of the Irvine pike. She has offered aid on the McKee road and has been actually begging for the remainder of the Boonesboro pike. And who doubts that she will take the seven miles of Lexington pike when she has left a man to see that the contractor keep the unfinished part in good condition until work is resumed in the spring?

Every venture of life calls for the exercise of faith. Let us have faith in God, faith in our fellow man and faith in good roads.

JUDGE SULLIVAN ON LOCAL CONDITIONS

Richmond's Regent Of Eastern Normal School Starts Interesting Discussion Today

(Second Installment)
I have attempted to keep up with important local, State, National and International problems, as I have always heretofore done. I have detected, I think, a new spirit of co-operation among the people of Richmond and Madison County generally, and less jealousy and spitefulness than I have ever seen before. I have attempted to discover the cause of this great and happy change, and I am inclined to think it is due to the spirit of co-operation aroused by our great World War, and to our having a Daily Newspaper which gives us each afternoon the most important world news of the day, but even more important than such world news, it gives all the local news and happenings of our city and county daily and impartially, and has thus developed a spirit among us all of comradeship, fellowship and co-operation.

When the Chamber of Commerce was organized, I was away in a Southern State, on my usual winter trip and was amazed and delighted that it had been organized. I at once wrote to R. E. Turley, its President, asking how this important step had been taken and he in answer said it was easy to organize for the people were ready and only needed an invitation to join and co-operate for the public good.

Important Recent Events

Since I was stricken, nearly ten years ago, the World War has been by far the most tremendous event as it was indeed the greatest and most disastrous war—more property and human life have been destroyed than by one war ever before, and this war has in a marked degree affected all our people and will continue to do so for generations. But the next most important and far reaching event that has happened, according to my idea, since I was paralyzed, affecting the people of Madison County and of all Kentucky was the successful organization of the Burley Tobacco Co-operative Association. I am proud that at the head of this great business association stands James C. Stone as its first president and guide. He is a son of Madison as each of his splendid parents also was. I congratulate him on his great and deserved success. I also congratulate T. S. Burnam and his associates who were able after great effort to lead their fellow farmers of Madison County into this splendid organization even though they went in by only a small majority. This is the first Tobacco Association which has been started in Kentucky based on sound law and justice, though I concede the entire sincerity of purpose of the others.

Our Duty To Richmond and Eastern Normal

My real purpose in writing to you this article is to point out to you a course of action which I conceive to be a study we all owe to Richmond and to our Normal School and Teachers College. As I go around in the State, I am often asked, and also written to, the question "Do the people of Richmond and Madison County fully appreciate their having our great Eastern Kentucky State Normal School and Teachers College located among them?" I invariably answer such questions "Yes." But, often I am told by prominent people elsewhere this to wit: "Richmond does not properly or fully appreciate having the Normal School nothing like Winchester or Paris or Ashland would or Danville does in having Centre College, which only has a small fraction of the attendance Eastern Normal has."

It is because of these questions and statements and an opinion rather adverse to Richmond which is being created throughout the State that I in my own hand write you this letter for you to think about, so that you will have Richmond do its full duty, if it has not done so. If I were well, I would Danville, Ky., Oct. 23—Mrs. W. H. Shanks, of Stanford, was elected governor of the eighth district Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. C. E. Tate, of the same city, was made corresponding secretary at the annual district meeting held in the Methodist church here Saturday with more than one hundred women in attendance. The convention next year will be in Stanford.

Twelve state officers and club presidents, 80 visitors and 20 delegates from the eight clubs of the district were in attendance. The hostess club was the Woman's Club of Danville, and Mrs. J. E. Stormes, of Lancaster, the district governor, presided. Other outgoing officers are Mrs. G. B. Claxton, of Lawrenceburg, vice-governor, and Mrs. H. S. Hudson, of Lancaster, corresponding secretary.

"No Use To the World" Two Illinois Men Quit It

(By Associated Press)
Rockford, Ill., Oct. 23—Leaving a note saying that neither of them was of any use in the world, Thomas Cornwell, 67, beat and strangled to death his wife's uncle, Curtis Smith, 69, and then killed himself with poison.

have been my pleasure to go before you in person and speak separately or conjointly to the membership of each one of your clubs. But as this I can not do, I take my pen in hand.

I think, yes, I know that Richmond and Madison County appreciate the Normal School and their appreciation for and interest in the school is daily growing. If Richmond has heretofore apparently failed to do her full duty, it is due to the existence of circumstances beyond its control, but these have all recently changed.

Our Normal School has been landlocked, surrounded entirely (excepting a small front on Lancaster Avenue owned by Dr. Williams) by the lands of four widow women to wit: Mrs. Elven V. Gibson on two sides of our Campus, Mrs. William Irvine on a third side of the Campus, Mrs. W. W. Watts and Mrs. E. T. Burnam on the fourth side. All these four widows are most excellent ladies and each maintains and has maintained an elegant, comfortable and Christian home and even in wealthy circumstances, but only one of them has taken in or housed any pupils for the Normal School to wit: Mrs. Gibson, and she has done this for the Normal School as she also did for Central University to the extent that her rather small farm home would admit. I am also inclined to think that two of these widow ladies to wit: Mrs. Watts and Mrs. Burnam could not have sold any of their lots without injury to their homes.

In the last year or two Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Irvine and Mary Walker have died, and the death of the two latter named makes it possible for lots to be opened up for residence and private dormitory purposes and for the city to be extended in the direction of the Normal School if only lots be opened up.

THOUSAND ATTEND REVIVAL SERVICE

At First Christian Church Sunday—Rotary and Exchange Clubs Attend Tonight

More than a thousand people crowded into the First Christian church last night, using every available space, to hear Dr. Robert N. Simpson and have part in the musical program which preceded his sermon on "The Call of the Far Country." The evening service was the culmination of a day when all services taxed the capacity of the church. Beginning with a Bible School of more than 500, in which the men's class had 137, the day's services established a high attendance record. Eight were added to church during the day. Both Dr. Simpson's sermons and the special music were of the highest order. In the morning his appeal was for loyalty on the part of church members in the promotion of the program of the Kingdom, while the evening sermon was evangelistic. In this sermon Dr. Simpson made a tender and compelling appeal to the man who had never surrendered his life to the mastery of Christ. He swayed the great audience with his retelling of the story of the Prodigal Son.

Tonight the members of the Exchange and Rotary Clubs will be the special guests of the meeting. They will meet at the Gynodon Hotel at 7:00 and go to the church in a body where a block of seats will be reserved for them. While Dr. Simpson's message will have a special meaning to the business men of the town, the public at large will be just as much interested as these. The meeting will continue through the week, closing next Sunday night. Tomorrow morning Dr. Simpson will speak to the high school and at noon tomorrow will be the special speaker guest at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club. Last night at 6 o'clock he addressed the student body of the Eastern Kentucky Normal School in the chapel. Miss White also appeared in this service in a solo.

STONE TELLS OF POOL'S SUCCESS

Head Of Burley Co-operative Gives Account Of Stewardship In Shelbyville Speech

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 23—Assurance of protection to the loyal tobacco growers who are members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association from contract breakers, warehousemen encouraging contract breakers, or from any other source was given the tobacco growers of Shelby county Saturday in an address by James C. Stone, president and general manager of the Burley Co-operative, who addressed a large crowd at the courthouse at Shelbyville Saturday afternoon.

President Stone also rendered an account of stewardship on the part of the officials of the Association, declared that but for the formation of the Association they would have received probably no more for their crop last year than they received for the crop of 1920, said that most of the outside growers admitted that this was true and urged them all to "be good sports and come on into the Association and let's make it unanimous."

Judge L. H. Thurman, of Springfield, spoke at Gallatin, in Spencer county, Tennessee which recently signed up practically all its crop in the Association and where Chairman W. V. Allen, a Gallatin banker, is endeavoring to get a unanimous sign-up.
